Eric Johnson's favorite acoustic guitar - Martin d-45

Eric Johnson was born in 1954 in Austin, TEXAS. Influenced by his father, he began to love music at the age of 3, began to learn piano at the age of 5, began to show his music talent at the age of 8 and started to compose music. At the age of 10, he began to learn guitar and form a band with his peers, and started music journey.

In China, Eric Johnson is well known in G3. His precise performance and rich pentatonic scale application are imitated and worshipped by many guitar lovers. Eric Johnson's favorite acoustic guitar is a Martin D45 guitar. The guitar means a lot to Eric Johnson because it was given to him by his late father.

In the early 1980s, young Eric Johnson was not very wealthy. Once, his apartment was stolen and part of Eric Johnson's guitar was stolen. Therefore, Eric Johnson's father decided to give Eric Johnson a Martin D45 guitar as a gift to support and motivate him in order to appease young Eric Johnson.

In an interview with Eric Johnson, we learned that this Martin D45 guitar was built before the reconstruction of the guitar in 1980. This guitar is not a retro Martin guitar, because the beam of the guitar has been cut, and this guitar is not as embedded as the current Martin D45 fingerboard. The fingerboard Mosaic pattern of the Martin D45 guitar is light snow pattern. Eric Johnson thinks that the moderate tone color of this guitar is the coolest guitar, and it is also the acoustic guitar with the best sound in the studio. Eric Johnson has written many songs on this guitar.
